Foreword

This film is about helping you and your family to make small changes to the ways in which you cook your food. Fusion cooking is all about combining traditional recipes with other flavours and cuisines to bring variety and excitement to the food we eat.

The tips and advice contained in this film are about reducing the amount of salt, fat and sugar we apply to all the different types of food we eat as well as new foods we like to try.

This can help prevent you from developing a range of long term conditions like Coronary Heart Disease, Stroke, Obesity and Diabetes.

Eating more healthily and keeping as active as possible can make an amazing difference to the health and wellbeing of you and your family.

Focus on Food Safety

Cooking

Check food is thoroughly cooked at 75°C or above. Make sure it is steaming hot. If cooking meat, check that the juices run clear with no blood.

Cleaning

"Clean as you go"
- use the correct cleaning agent for the task. A food safe anti-bacterial cleaner is good or steaming hot soapy water and a clean cloth.

Cross-contamination

Keep raw and cooked foods apart. Use different chopping boards for raw and cooked/ready-to-eat foods

Chilling

Keep foods chilled at 5°C or below. Use a fridge thermometer to check if it's correct. Store raw meat and eggs on the bottom shelf of the fridge.

Wise About Food

By Sarah Scotland

Do we really know what is in the food we are eating? Food is made up of a variety of ingredients. If we eat too much of some of these ingredients, it can have a poor effect on our health.

By reading this booklet and watching this film, you can learn how to cook with less salt, oil and sugar.

Fats

Think about how you cook your food and the fats that you use. So often too much fat is used – how much should you use?

Only a tablespoon is needed, make sure you use one instead of estimating. Ghee is full of saturated fat - try and cook with rapeseed or sunflower instead.

This works really well and you will really taste the flavours rather than them being masked by oil.

Where else can fat be found?

Be aware of cheese, this is full of fat. Paneer is full of fat also. Try and use semi skimmed milk, full fat is not needed. When cooking with meats and chicken cut all the fat off.

Sugar

Think about the sweets you like and the way that you eat them, for example do you put Brondi in yoghurt?

These all taste great but can be high in sugar, ghee and condensed milk. It is easy to buy packet mixes of popular puddings but these can be the unhealthier ways to make them. Often manufacturers add extra salt and sugar to help make the product last longer.

Try making them from scratch - the recipes can be altered easily to be just as tasty and healthy. Why not try making the semolina we have shown you in the video? The recipe can be found here in the booklet.

Salt

We all use too much salt in our cooking. Not only does it mask the flavour but can lead to a number of health issues such as high blood pressure, heart disease and stroke. As Ghee contains lots of salt, remember to swap to sunflower or rapeseed oil.

Ready Meals

High levels of salt are found in supermarket ready meals. By making your own in large quantities you can freeze it for another day.

Ready made packets of spices often have too much salt added, why not try buying individual spices and mix your own flavours. You can freeze these too if needed. Learn to play around more with spices – try herbs, thyme, marjoram, rosemary and mint, these give a lovely taste to any dish.

Small Changes

1. Try and not deep fry very often. If you deep fry again, think how this food is covered in oil and is not good for health.
2. To be even healthier make sure that you change your oil frequently.
3. Poppadum's that also might be deep-fried are equally tasty grilled or microwaved.
4. Think about the foods that you deep-fry such as samosas. Try making your own from filo pastry and baking in the oven. A recipe for this can be found here in the booklet.

Top Tips

- Eat more fruit and vegetable
- Try wholemeal flour for Chapatis and Naans
- Try brown rice instead of white
- Cook with less oil, use rapeseed or sunflower instead of ghee
- Eat smaller portions
- Try not to snack between meals or if you do try healthy ones
- Eat fish, especially oily fish like trout, salmon, mackerel or kippers for the important omega 3 fat.
- Try and get more Vitamin D by going outside more
- Eat less puddings or least change the ways you make them.
- Being more active along with eating healthy will improve your overall health.

By making these changes slowly and being more active, you can improve your general health and eat healthy, lovely tasting food.

Nutrition labels can help you cut down on saturated fat.
Look out for "saturates" or "sat fat" on the label.

High: More than 5g saturates per 100g. May be colour-coded red.

Low: 1.5g saturates or less per 100g. May be colour-coded green.

Medium: If the amount of saturated fat per 100g is in between these figures, that is a medium level, and may be colour-coded amber.

The label below is an example provided by a leading supermarket, which shows clearly that the food is high in saturated fat, because the saturates section is colour-coded red.

Quick Naan Bread

Ingredients

- 250g self-raising flour
- 1/2 tsp salt
- 2 tbsp vegetable oil

Method

1. Put the flour in a mixing bowl add the salt, oil and milk.
Mix it together*
2. Leave to rest for 5-10 minutes.
- * If the mixture is too wet, add more flour. If it's too dry add more milk.
3. Form into large flat tear-drops.
4. Cook on a dry frying pan turning over when golden brown on each side.
5. Alternatively, place on a baking sheet in the oven and cook for 5-10 minutes at Gas mark 4/180C/350F.

Handy Tip

You can make the Naans more interesting by adding flavourings. Try adding finely chopped or crushed garlic. Chopped fresh coriander also goes well. Alternatively add desiccated coconut, raisins and ground almonds to make a Peshwari Naan. Sprinkle on the flavourings just before folding the naans into their final shape so the flavouring are trapped inside.

Handy Tip

Bread making is a great way to introduce children to cooking. Since Naan bread doesn't need any yeast or proving this is easy too!
